

Living & Working In Ontario Test Review

For the Living & Working In Ontario test coming up on June 7, students should know the following information:

- the capital of Ontario
- the capital of Canada
- Ontario's three physical regions
- the location, the physical features, the natural resources, the climate and vegetation located in ONE of these regions
- how to draw and label a compass rose
- how mapmakers denote small cities, large cities and capital cities on maps
- the five categories of area use (country, province/territory, region, city, town)
- the three types of communities and what they are known for
- a description of two of the uses of land (residential, commercial, industrial, institutionalized, greenspace)
- positive and negative factors influencing First Nations people's decisions to live on reserves or not
- what a provincial park is, and why are they special
- how land use affects the environment negatively, and one way humans can lessen their impact.
