of Americans say
they're very satisfied
with their current job

Are you hoping to switch careers? You're not alone. Less than half of Americans say they're very satisfied with their current job, according to "The State of American Jobs," a 2016 Pew Research Center report.

But that doesn't have to be the case! You deserve to have a fulfilling, enjoyable career — a career that's possible with real estate.

Many people spend a decade or two in a particular field before realizing that they would like to try something new. Although switching careers can feel intimidating, prioritizing your job satisfaction is a brave step toward building the kind of life you want.

When it comes to making the change, The CE Shop can help. With our convenient online courses, you can make a seamless transition to a thriving career in real estate.

WHY DO PEOPLE Change Careers?

Some of the main reasons people change careers are:

- Wanting a new challenge
- Needing a bigger paycheck
- Wanting recognition
- Looking for advancement opportunities
- Desiring less stress
- Wanting flexibility
- Experiencing burnout

But when you launch a career in real estate, you have the ability to choose when you work, where you work, and how you work – so when it comes to salary, the sky's the limit.

IMPORTANT Real Estate Terms

As you consider your new career, there are many different jobs and niches in the real estate industry that you can explore, but first, let's define a few terms you're likely to come across: real estate agent, Broker, and REALTOR®. Many people outside of the real estate industry use the terms interchangeably, but it's important for you to know the difference.

License types vary by state, but in general:

REAL ESTATE AGENT: A catch-all term for real estate professionals involved in the purchase or sale of property. Most agents start their careers as Sales Agents, and all must work under a Broker.

BROKER: Someone who has been in the real estate industry for years, has completed additional education, and thus has the ability to start their own brokerage. There are several types of Brokers, including Associate and Designated Brokers.

REALTOR®: An agent or a Broker who is a member of the National Association of REALTORS®.

THE STATE Licensing Exam

Once you've completed your Pre-Licensing coursework, it's time to take the state licensing exam.

When you're studying, consider these tips:

- Write new information down
- Read your state's candidate handbook
- Remember acres and miles in feet (trust us on this one)
- Practice, practice, practice
- Exercise on your study breaks
- Don't pull an all-nighter

After you've passed the state exam, you can apply for your real estate license. The application might include a background check, fingerprints, and fees, though these requirements will vary by state. But once your application is accepted, it's time to celebrate — you're a licensed real estate agent!
