50 WORDS | #CC50WORDS

Write a story using 50 words...EXACTLY!

No more. No less.

Exactly 50 words.

Here are two examples...

Ashleigh Petal had his fingers up his nose, again. Natalie Burton sat quietly at the back of the room doodling in her diary. Ricky Arbon scrunched up little balls of paper and flicked them at the back of Renae Finnucane's head. But still, our teachers voice droned on...and on...and on.

When I was shot, fear seized me at first. No surprise that.

But once I realized I wasn't going to die – despite the thermonuclear pain and widening puddle of weirdly warm blood – my mind recalibrated. And one thought, comforting yet disturbing, leapt into my head: I need to Tweet this.

TV/MOVIE PITCH | #CCPITCH

TV/MOVIE PITCH

PITCH: A very short summary used to sell something, in this case a TV show/movie to a producer

Create a sales pitch for a new TV show or movie.

Who is the demographic for the show/movie? Where is it set?
What's it about? What are the characters? Who will the actors be?

PITCH EXAMPLE: The Simpsons

An animation, comedy about modern day "nuclear", slightly dysfunctional family. The father loves food(he's overweight), beer, television and his family. He is stupid and lazy, but loveable. The mother is a hard working committed mother who tolerates her husband, to a point. She is the "straight man". Their son, Bart is a troublemaker at school, always looking for shortcuts and mischief, the opposite to his geeky sister. Lisa, is 7 years old and incredibly intelligent. It is hard to believe she is her fathers daughter, and her brothers sister. Each week one of more members of the family make a bad decision which they have to find a solution to.
