When construction started for a new shopping center, Brian couldn't resist going there. What really interested him was the ground where the building was going to be. There might be something interesting buried there.

He was looking closely when one of the workmen called to him, "Hey, get away from there! It's not safe near that equipment."

"Sorry," Brian replied. He was just about to leave when he saw something small, round, and glittering. He picked up a very old-looking coin! On his way out, a worker asked what he had found.

"Just a really old coin," Brian answered. He showed it to the crew leader, who said, "You might have something valuable. You should find out about it."

Brian had found an interesting old coin at a construction site. He took it home to see if he could find out more about it. When he got home, he showed the coin to his parents.

“Do you think it’s worth anything?” he asked his father.

“I don’t know an awful lot about coins,” Dad replied, “but we can do some research to try to find out.”

Brian and his father searched online to see if they could find a coin that matched the one Brian had discovered. After a while, they finally found a match. The coin they saw online was worth five hundred dollars! Dad and Brian decided to take Brian’s coin to a coin dealer and see if it was valuable.

Brian had found an old coin, so he and his dad went to a coin shop.

“What can I do for you?” the coin dealer asked as he greeted them.

“I found this coin yesterday, and I’m wondering if it’s valuable,” Brian said.

“Let me examine it, and we’ll see what it might be worth,” said the dealer.

“How can you tell whether a coin is valuable?” Brian wondered.

“Three of the things we consider are the year the coin was made, the coin’s condition, and the mint mark. That’s a special symbol that shows where the coin was made,” said the coin dealer.

BRIAN FINDS A TREASURE

Brian and his father were at Center City Coin Shop. They had first visited the shop a few days earlier when Brian found an old coin. He wanted to know whether the coin was valuable, and the dealer had promised to look it up. Today, they would find out whether the coin was worth a lot of money. After the dealer greeted them, he said, “I found out some information about your coin.”

“That’s great,” Brian’s father said. “I hope you’ve got some good news for us.”

“Well,” said the dealer, “the first thing I did was look up the year the coin was minted, or made. You’ve got a very old coin here—it’s more than 150 years old! I also examined your coin’s mint mark. There are several mints in the United States, and they all make coins. Each one has a special symbol called a mint mark that it puts on the coins it makes. You can look at any coin and tell by the mint mark which mint made that coin. I found that your coin was minted in Philadelphia. Finally, I looked at the coin to check its condition. Coins that are in perfect condition are called ‘mint condition.’ They look like they just came from the mint. Coins in mint condition are worth more than coins that are worn. Your coin isn’t in mint condition, but it is in very good shape.”

“So, how much is my coin worth?” Brian asked eagerly.

“I did some research and found that coins like yours can sell for three hundred dollars.”

“Wow! That means you’ll give me three hundred dollars for it, right?” Brian said happily.

“What it really means is that I will probably be able to sell it for three hundred dollars. Since I need to earn a profit, how about if I buy your coin for two hundred dollars?”

Brian and his father agreed to the deal, and Brian’s father filled out the papers. In no time, Brian had two hundred dollars to put in his bank account.
